IN MEMORIAM.

In loving remembrance of our dear father, Washington M. Brenizer, who departed this life October 13, 1904, aged 68 years, 2 months and 12 days.

Home is not home since dear father's not there, Our home is so lonely, so dark and so drear. Never more will we hear his footsteps fall, He's gone to that home prepared for us all.

We miss his kind and welcome hand, His fond and earnest care, Our home is dark without him, A shadow o'er our life is cast.

Death came silently but sad, To close his earthly days, He seemed but sleeping when it came, He is but sleeping now.

Farewell dear papa, a sad farewell, Since your dear face no more we see, A few more years on earth to dwell, And we shall all united be.

By his daughter, ANNE TATE, Dear grandpa when we saw that we must part, You drew like cords about our hearts. Now we must drink the bitter cup, And say our last farewell.

His little granddaughters, ESTELLA AND HELEN TATE.

N. G. P. CAMP SITE.

It Looks as Though Gettysburg Had a Good Chance.

The question uppermost in many minds in this town at the present time is whether or not the National Guard of Pennsylvania will be located here on a permanent site. If a camp site is purchased by the State brigade encampments will be done away with and every year there will be a division camp. It means much to this community to have this brought about. Ten thousand soldiers encamped right along this place would mean thousands of dollars distributed every year here. It would give the town a big boost of material prosperity and everyone should be a unit on this proposition.

On last Saturday a majority of the members of the State Commission to purchase a permanent camp site were here visiting the field. They came in the morning in company with Reading railway officials, Gen. Supt. A. F. Dice and General Passenger Agent Edison J. Weeks. The members of the party were Governor Pennypacker, Adjutant General Stewart, State Treasurer Mathews, Auditor General Snyder, Major General Miller and Brigadier General Schell. It is said Governor Pennypacker wanted to go over the ground before arriving at a final conclusion. The party drove over the field leaving in the afternoon without indicating in any way whether a conclusion had been arrived at.

The Stine Sacrifice Clothing and Furnishing Sale still going on. One-third the stock has been sold but there is still plenty left for you. Call while the selection is good.

FOURTEEN HUNTING CLUBS

CAMPS EXTEND FROM PEN-MAR TO PINE GROVE FURNACE

Something of Life of the Hunters—Seventeen Deer Have Been Shot.

Ranged along the South Mountain between Pen-Mar, and Pine Grove Furnace, Pa., to-day are no less than fourteen deer hunting clubs in camp. These camps are not, as many suppose, made up individually of some jolly party whose object is tent life and a good time, but organized bodies of skilled hunters, kept together by annual dues and stated meetings, during the year, with a president, secretary and treasurer, whose election is always attended with the greatest interest.

When it is known that none of these clubs has a membership of less than ten and that the largest has forty-three some idea of the preparation necessary for a successful hunt may be formed. For it is seldom any one of these camps break up without a deer to show on its pole, besides much smaller game.

The question of hunting territory is arranged carefully. No two camps hunting over the same ground. This, besides avoiding confusion, reduces to a minimum the danger of a member being shot by another club member in mistake, as so often happens in the far northern woods.

Despite the fact that there is so many of these camps within a space, seventeen miles long by seven wide no mix-ups have so far occurred and there seems to be a fair distribution of the deer amongst them all.

Nearly all of these deer clubs are under canvas, the largest the Cash-town Hunting Club, having no less than eighty feet of tenting, divided into three compartments, one for cooking and eating, one for lounging purposes and the last for sleeping. The sleeping compartment is fitted up to accommodate forty men and consists of two continuous bunks, ranged the whole length of the sleeping tent, with a passage way through the centre, dividing the two so that the sleeper rests with his head to the wall of the tent and his body extended toward the aisle.

All three compartments are fitted up with the old fashioned wood stoves and these are kept blazing merrily all the time. In this way much discomfort is avoided caused by weather conditions.

The lounging room is given up mostly to guns, equipments and clothing, but through the centre runs a long table with benches at which games can be played, or reading indulged in.

The kitchen and dining room compartment is fitted up with every convenience and a stock of provisions laid in, that would surprise the uninitiated. The food is of the good and substantial kind and prepared by two cooks. In the case of the Cashtown Club, the membership being so large (forty three) that one cook cannot begin to serve the appetites seated around the long table in the tent.

A tramp over the mountains in the vicinity of this camp after the cunning deer will be sure to bring an appetite to one that brings back childhood days, and the time, when it was no achievement to eat the third piece of pie and have no ache or pain afterwards.

The above named hunting club, camps in the vicinity of Graeffenburg, beside the old Pittsburg Pike, and almost in sight of Miss Mira Deck's handsome mountain home.

Several of the camps in this locality have much to thank Miss Deck for and always show appreciation of her kindness when their respective portions of game are finally divided.

All clubs hunting on state lands, and many of them do, are required to make a report of their membership to the Chief Warden.

This is principally done to keep in touch with hunters from other States who are required to pay a license of ten dollars before they can hunt in Pennsylvania. Every courtesy is extended to members of camping clubs, on the South Mountains by State officials, but in return, they are expected to observe the rules of the Forestry Commission most carefully. This is invariably done and a member doing otherwise with one of these clubs is politely but firmly told that he must be governed by these rules, or resign.

So far seventeen deer have been killed in the above locality by the different clubs, the largest weighing one hundred and ninety pounds.

Perusal of the membership of these clubs show names from Pittsburg, Altoona, Harrisburg and Philadelphia as well as other cities and towns scattered throughout the State, with the local people who are members of the clubs predominating.

The Cashtown Club did not fail this year of making good their record of always killing one deer on Thanksgiving day. For the last five years they have always gotten one or two deer on that day, so that it is kind of a joke that the club keeps a deer for that day. This year was no exception and the one deer was on hand to be shot.

Ira Taylor killed the largest deer of the season near Hunters Run on Thanksgiving day. It weighed 205 pounds. It was near the clay works and five deer have already been shot this season near the same place.

A VERY DESTRUCTIVE FIRE

SWEEPS AWAY MCKNIGHTS-TOWN STATION.

The Loss Will Amount to Over $3000 With Two-thirds Insurance.

A fire broke out in the cellar of the store of Oliver J. Fritz at McKnightstown Station on Sunday night shortly after one o'clock. It is supposed to have reached the oil in cellar soon after having started, for when it was discovered the brick station and store room and weatherboarded warehouse attached were in a blaze and nothing could be done to save the buildings. The creamery was in the way of the flames and the three buildings were totally destroyed.

The fire attracted but few people and these few could do but little to prevent the work of destruction. It was only after a great fight by the few persons on hand that the dwelling of Mr. Fritz was saved, being repeatedly threatened. The buildings destroyed are all owned by Oliver J. Fritz and his loss is estimated at between $3000 and $4000. There was insurance on buildings in the Mummastown Mutual Fire Protection Society and The Liberty and Independent Fire Insurance Association to the amount of $2150.

Light of a fire attracted some attention on last Saturday evening but it turned out to be a brush heap fire out in the direction of home of Oscar D. McMillan.

A fire Monday noon destroyed the barn of Daniel Diehl in Mountpleasant township. Not a building on the place escaped except the dwelling house. Loss of $2,500 is partially insured in the Mummastown Co.

50TH TEACHERS' INSTITUTE CLOSE OF A SUCCESSFUL WEEK OF INSTRUCTION.

Prof. Roth Has Again Demonstrated His Fitness and Efficiency as County Superintendent.

Tuesday Afternoon.

Institute opened at 1:30, Supt. Roth presiding. Music and drill by Prof. March.

Work for the day was resumed by Miss Johnson taking the first period in "Primary Reading." Teach the pupil to read by example. A. V. "I can run" and all in the class will do it. In giving this lesson to them on the board, write it on a phonetic chart. The speaker advised the class to be in groups rather than in lines, as you are in closer touch with them. It is especially why mentally. The children should be taught to recognize a new word or new object, whenever it is presented. How would I make the step to sentence from word. Never put the stories under each other. After the preparatory work then comes the work regularly. The teacher who put his or her personality into the work is the most successful. Let them come from the known to the unknown. Never mention the word as used, let the child find it. Help the child to help himself. Be careful in the use of crayon. Imitation is great in the child. Next comes the ear training.

Music, "Come Away."

Dr. Albert took up the next subject, "Geography." The first period was given to negative geography. The true definition of geography is "The Home of Man." Teach the child what local environment has to do with man. Not too much technicality, but more oral work.

Music, "Over the Snow."

Dr. Pattengill resumed his talk on "The Big Four" taking the last two words, "Gumption and Gimp." Where to get these principles of different education. You get them in schools, normals, colleges and institutes, which are nothing more than training schools. Know your principles and get them. Don't be afraid to say "Gumption." It is not a slang word. It is a good old-fashioned Anglo-Saxon word. Gumption means content. You can train your boys and girls to get it. Gumption can run a school, but it can not teach it. Gumption is made up of three parts, capacity, shrewdness and address. Pupils should be taught to think—"free thinkers." Give plenty of mental work and keep it up. "Gimp," the spirit, the zeal, your enthusiasm, your energy. The schools of this republic make the government. After adjourning at 4 p. m., Tuesday, the teachers with their instructors with the ex-Co. Supt. were photographed on the U. B. Church lawn by M. F. Williams, a local photographer.

Tuesday Evening.

A large audience greeted the Rev. Stanley F. Krebs of Greensburg, Pa., who held the close attention of his audience for nearly two hours, on the subject of "Drifting, or the Psychology of Pluck." Rev. Krebs is a remembered is an Adams county man, son of Dr. Walter E. Krebs of Littlestown, Pa. Music was furnished by the college Orchestra.

Wednesday Morning.

Institute convened at the usual hour. Music "Message Sweet" led by Prof. March. Devotional Exercises conducted by Dr. T. C. Billheimer, President of the Gettysburg School Board. Mr.

Colds. Their Proper Treatment and Care.

Commonly the first symptom of a "cold" is a chilly feeling, accompanied by sneezing, or a tickling in the throat. The most frequent of external causes are draughts, wet or cold feet, or going from hot rooms suddenly into cold ones. More frequently there is an inner cause—namely the stagnation of the blood caused by constipation or biliousness. Almost the first symptom is the feeling of cold in the feet and increased discharge from the nose.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. Tonics consisting of large portions of alcohol, iron or cod liver oil do not bring the desired change in the blood, because they do not enter the system and are not absorbed into the blood with the exception of the alcohol, which shrivels up the red blood corpuscles when it comes in contact with them. We recommend the botanical extract of Dr. Pierce because it contains no alcohol, and offers a reasonable and scientific method of treating the blood by improving the nutritive functions of the patient. The "Golden Medical Discovery" accomplishes this, by first restoring the enfeebled digestive organs, so that food the natural tissue builder will be digested and assimilated.

Accept no substitute for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach.

RUTS.

The walking sick, what a crowd of them there are: Persons who are thin and weak but not sick enough to go to bed.

"Chronic cases" that's what the doctors call them, which in common English means—long sickness.

To stop the continued loss of flesh they need Scott's Emulsion. For the feeling of weakness they need Scott's Emulsion.

It makes new flesh and gives new life to the weak system.

Scott's Emulsion gets thin and weak persons out of the rut. It makes new, rich blood, strengthens the nerves and gives appetite for ordinary food.

Scott's Emulsion can be taken as long as sickness lasts and do good all the time.

There's new strength and flesh in every dose.

We will be glad to send you a few doses free.

W. Archer Burgoon, Chairman of the Committee on Professional Literature reported that the following text books have been adopted for the Teacher's Reading Course.

Seeley's School Management Price 90 cts. Shumell's History of Pa. 64c. Common Sense Dialectics 80 cts. Suggested by Committee.

W. A. Burgoon, Chairman. D. P. Delap. J. Z. Rudisill. Laura E. Starry. Eva M. Boyer

Report was received and adopted. Prof. March gave a short drill in short words to get correct tones words of two and three syllables were used. Learn the English Language through the vowels in Song.

Miss Johnson resumed her talk on Primary Reading. Our first sounds are important. The speaker outlined a full system of the different sounds and applied them in short stories. An extension drill was then given by the sound cards. Consonant drills should always be followed by vowel drills. Teachers as well as children need ear training. Give systematic blend work.

Supt. Roth appointed a committee to extend greetings to York Co. Institute from this Institute. Prof. W. J. Book, C. H. Richter, and Miss Julia Deatrick composed that committee.

Music "Come Away." Dr. Pattengill was next on the program. "Greasing the Squeak" was the subject. Don't grease the whole child over but oil the right part, develop that part which is needed.

The speaker gave the following words on the black board, for correct pronunciation: won't, automobile, area, past, water, dirigible, Arctic, not, care, a la carte, Asia, cement, Roosevelt, tabled, note, asphalt, program, Vladivostok, Marquette, either, Mukden.

Institute was favored with several selections in Elocution by Prof. Wm. A. Chambers, of Gettysburg, Pa.

Dr. Albert took up the last period of the morning. "Some Elements of Success in Teaching."

1. Take care of your health. 2. Study your lessons. Buy 15-20 books on teaching and study them.

The speaker said he knew teachers who were getting food to teach from Detroit "Free Press" and "McClure's Magazine." He did not condemn the magazine, it was good of its kind, but no good for the teacher.

3. "Mingle with the Common People." And lastly he advised Whitcomb Keiley's Advice—Pray and hustle with all the powers that God gave you to teach school well. Dr. Albert took leave of the institute but before going away he related a story to illustrate and I emphasize what his work meant this week. The only way to get many men is to have many boys. Adjourned to 1:30 p. m.

PENNSYLVANIA FORESTRY.

A VISIT TO THE SOUTH MOUNTAIN RESERVATION.

The State's Purchase of Forest Land and the Reasons Therefor.

As a member of a committee of the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, I had the opportunity recently to visit the South Mountain State Forest Reservation, the Camp San Antonio, the Forestry school and the forest nursery; and as I have no doubt that the views of some at least of the readers of the COMPILER are as varied as were my own regarding the forestry movement I have undertaken to write here in part the information and impressions I received concerning it.

The purchase of this land by the State—about 50,000 acres in all, of which 10,000, approximately, are located in Adams—was made under the Act of Assembly of March 13, 1895, by which act a Bureau of Forestry in the Department of Agriculture was created. The Forestry Commissioner chosen under its provisions was Dr. J. T. Rothrock, of West Chester, who was in charge since September, 1895, until a few months ago, when he resigned on account of bad health. He is, however, still acting in the general management, and it was on his invitation and under his guidance that the committee had the pleasure of going over the grounds and receiving full and accurate information.

Pennsylvania has acquired within her boundaries some 500,000 acres of forest land, with other tracts in the course of purchase and in contemplation which will make the aggregate in the near future about 1,300,000 acres located in about twenty-three counties. The reservation in the South Mountain, including that in Franklin and Adams counties, is therefore a comparatively small holding, but it extends, nevertheless, over a large section of country and requires constant guarding and care.

For the purposes of management this tract is divided into two reservations, one having its headquarters at Graeffenburg, the other at Mont Alto. The old Graeffenburg Inn, which is well known to many of our people, is now owned by the State, but it is conducted under private control as a stopping place for visitors. The house and grounds surrounding have been greatly improved by the direction of Colonel Meredith, the efficient overseer of that section.

We spent part of a day and the night at Graeffenburg, and started early the next morning for the Camp Sanatorium, about six miles distant and near the place known as New Baltimore, this county. We stayed there an hour or two inspecting the camp and in conversation with the patients. From the camp the drive is three miles to Mont Alto where are located the Forest Academy and the nurseries.

These various departments of the Reservation are all of great interest, and any one of them would afford abundant material for a descriptive article to cover many columns in this paper. I therefore at this time suggest but a few of the reasons offered for forest preservation.

The forestry movement does not emanate from a sentiment. It is a plain, practical proposition looking to the preservation of one of the State's most valuable resources so as to prevent the vast injury which would be worked by its destruction. Forest protection is clearly a necessity: it is a duty which the Commonwealth owes its people.

The preservation and restoration of these lands for the mere purpose of growing timber is important, but it is not nearly so essential to the welfare of the people as the protection of the headwaters of streams and the water sheds which help to supply them. The forests are an immense reservoir which conserve water and in a measure prevent floods.

This fact is not usually appreciated, and it was only a few years ago that the Commonwealth became aroused to the importance of the subject. Since then forestry has become a science and has attracted the attention of many thinking people. It is properly under State supervision by reason of its very general influence and the magnitude of the undertaking.

The original object appears to have been merely to save timber from fires and other destructive agencies and to protect the streams which have their source in the timberlands, but there have grown out of it the plan of creating health-giving resorts and the maintenance of schools, where young men are taught the science of forestry, and nurseries for the propagation of the various species of trees indigenous to the soil.

I am disposed to think that any of these features of the movement is of sufficient importance to justify the State in the part it has taken, although, certainly, that which concerns the whole people in the greatest degree is forest preservation in its relation to water supply.

A strong mountain stream provides Gettysburg with wholesome water, and while it appears to be abundant any material diminution of it would cause serious difficulties. Marsh creek is not only useful to Gettysburg; it is a timbered power for many mills on many years and has been of great benefit to every farm owner through whose land it runs. It has its beginning in the South Mountain through which it flows for several miles, gathering force from a multitude of springs, and the timber and the "forest floor" along its route, which are, as it were, the store-house from which the springs get their strength, be removed, watered, would become smaller, if not altogether insignificant.

As a point, as follows, a very interesting and clear description of the method of water conservation in timber land by Dr. George H. Whit, State Forester.

The primary of the flow of water in the streams is the most important question which any engineer or today has to face, as it is most difficult to provide at the same time for the high maximum and extremely low minimum flow of streams. It has been proved beyond a doubt that a forest area having a proper and natural forest floor does conserve and regulate the rainfall of the country.

Within a forest to which fires have not had access, the top soil is found to be a deep humus covered with a thick layer of decaying leaves and small branches. This humus is as porous as a sponge. Any precipitation falling upon a forested area first strikes the leaves and branches. Some of the water falling in whatever form upon these is absorbed directly, some is evaporated from them and the remainder follows the trunk to the ground. The canopy of a forest intercepts about one-tenth of the precipitation, this amount varying, of course, according to density of the leaf cover. The other nine-tenths reach the ground, most of it directly and part, as has been stated, by following the trunks of the trees. The humus first becomes saturated and the remainder of the moisture seeks lower levels by means of the numerous openings and along the vegetable matter which is in the soil. This then flows out gradually and supplies the streams. Again the moisture taken up by the humus serves a special purpose. It in itself prevents the evaporation of moisture from the lower strata of the soil. Forests will not prevent floods and droughts entirely, but the forest floor will reduce the maximum flow of streams and raise the minimum flow."

C. E. STAHL.

The Passing of the American Forest.

Despite the rapid passing of the American forest, lumbering still stands in fourth place among the industries of the United States. Nearly three hundred thousand men are employed in lumbering occupations, and more than a hundred million dollars are annually divided among them in wages. Although the forests are falling faster than they can ever be restored, the demand for timber is increasing. The result seems inevitable, and present a problem as far-reaching as the area of the United States itself.

The picturesque logging regions of the northern woods, which once produced nearly one-half our entire supply, today hold in store but little of the valued pine which made them famous, and the cedar is also rapidly falling before the sawyers. The cypress trees of the southland, once despised by the builders, are from necessity going into nearly every portion of the construction of handsome houses. The famous logging scenes of Maine will soon live in history only, while all eyes turn to the Pacific slope for a nation's supply. This gone all is gone as far as the United States is concerned, except as the efforts of our national and State governments along the lines of scientific forestry succeed in coping with the situation.

The national forest reserves now aggregate more than sixty million acres, all of which have been provided for within the past thirteen years. Most of these reserves are west of the Rocky Mountains. The Bureau of Forestry has been making large strides of late in the direction of better management of timber land and likewise in the actual growing of trees. In Nebraska last year the work of planting two million seedlings in the sand hills of the Dismal River district was inaugurated. State legislatures are considering the exemption of timber lands from taxation. Schools of forestry are growing in number. Arlier Day, with its lesson, is observed in forty-four States and is a legal holiday in seven.

The fashion pages are unusually attractive, illustrating and describing the very latest modes in a way to make their construction during the busy festive season a pleasure instead of a task, and the literary and pictorial features are of rare excellence. A selection of Love Songs from the Wagner Operas, rendered into English by Richard de Gallienne and beautifully illustrated in colors by J. C. Leyendecker, occupies a prominent place, and a chapter in the Composers' Series, relating the Romance of Wagner and Cosima, is an interesting supplement to the lyrics. A very clever paper entitled "The Court Circles of the Republic," describes some unique phases of Washington social life from an unnamed contributor, who is said to write from the inner circles of society. There are short stories from the pens of E. Hopkinson Smith, Robert Grant, Alice Brown, Mary Stewart Cutting and Elmore Elliott Peake, and such interesting writers as Julia Magruder, L. Frank Baum, and Grace MacGowan Cooke hold the attention of the children. Many Christmas suggestions are given in needlework and the Cookery pages are redolent of the Christmas feast. In addition, there are the regular departments of the magazine, with many special articles on topics relating to woman's interests within and without the home.

She Was Doing Her Best.

Genuine Scotch cannyness shines through this story which the Philadelphia Ledger publishes: "A widow one day in spring was seen by the clerk of her parish crossing the churchyard with a watering pot and a bundle. 'Ah, Mistress Macfarish,' said the clerk, 'what's yer business wi' sic like gear as that yare carryin'?' 'Ah, weel, Mr. Macfarish,' replied the widow, 'I'm just goin' to my gude-man's grave. I've got some hay seeds in my bundle, which I'm going to sow upon it, and the water in the can is just to gie 'em a spring like.' 'The seed whinna want the watering,' rejoined the clerk. 'They'll spring finey themselves.' 'That may well be,' replied the widow, 'but ye dinna ken that my gude-man, as lay a-deed, just got me to promise that I'd never marry again till the cross had grown above his grave. And as I've had a good offer made me but yestreen, ye see, I dinna like to break my promise or be kept a lone widow, as ye see me!'

First Stogies.

"The first stogy was made by hand in the wilds of Pennsylvania," said an Allegheny City man. "The story which they tell once in awhile in West Virginia and which must be true is that the long cheroots derived their names from the town of Conestoga, Pa. An emigrant train of wagons was finding its way across the state, and a supply of tobacco was found at Conestoga. The emigrants got a lot of it, but failed to get any pipes, and so could not smoke unless they made pipes themselves. Necessity is the mother of invention. You may have heard that remark before. Anyhow, one of the men rolled a leaf of the tobacco in his hand and wrapped it with another leaf. That was the first stogy. Others followed his example, and they all called the article that they made a stoga in honor of the town at which the tobacco was secured. That is said to be the true story of how the name stogy originated."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Name of Turner.

Not every Turner owes his name to a lathe working ancestor, for, as Mr. Davies wrote in his account of the York press, "the elaborate initial and capital letters and foretold marginal borders (in the MSS) were invented and drawn by the turnmires and flourishers," and it is highly probable that they made impress on the nomenclature of posterity. Mr. Lower ("Patriarchia Britannica") says that "those who dislike the plebeian turnmire of Turner have contrived to turn it into Turnure on the plea that they came from some tour noir in Normandy. He states that Turner is one of the most common of surnames and inclines to agree with Mr. Ferguson that the popularity of turnmires or tournaments had much to do with it—Notes and Queries.

How Wellington Won Assaye.

The battle of Assaye, the most sanguinary for its size that Wellington ever saw, came about as the result of the purest chance plus the ability of one man to turn that chance to account. The duke confessed that his army was in a terrible predicament at the time. He had got the best native guides that money could secure, but when they came to the river Kistna they could not tell him of a ford. An enormous head of native cavalry was threatening him. The very existence of his army depended upon his reaching the opposite bank. But how could he do so? Failing all other methods, he took the advice of his cavalry forerunner and personally reconnoitered the river. By the aid of his glass he saw that there was a village on the right bank of the river and another village on the opposite bank. On the left bank, still his guides insisted that there was no ford. "Now," said Wellington, "then could not have built two villages so close to one another on opposite sides of a stream without some natural means of communication."

On that he formed the desperate resolution, as he called it, of marching for the river and trusting to there being a ford. He was right. He did find a passage, and his troops got over and won the battle of Assaye.

New Monument to 28th Pa. Regt.

The latest monument on the field has just been completed. It is in honor of the 28th Pennsylvania Infantry of the First Brigade, Second Division, Twelfth Corps.

Its position is on the west bank of Rock Creek, near McAllister's dam, east of East Confederate Avenue.

It is constructed of Westerly, Rhode Island granite and is in design an enlarged army knapsack with the straps and buckles in bas relief and mounted with the folded army blanket and with the star corps badge on base. The conception is striking and unique.

The 28th regiment was raised by Col. John W. Geary under permission obtained by him from President Lincoln, to serve for three years. It rendered persistent and valuable service throughout the whole war. It reached Gettysburg in time to participate in the glorious achievements of July 1, 2 and 3. In these brilliant engagements the 28th distinguished itself for its bravery and intrepidity. In consequence of heavy breastworks thrown up by order of General Geary its loss was only 25 in killed, wounded and missing.

The regiment on the 4th of July, 1863, assisted to bury the enemy's dead, 1200 of whom lay in front of General Geary's lines, and gathered up 500 of his muskets before its own works.

The 28th left the breastworks at Gettysburg on July 5 and marched in pursuit of the retreating enemy. Many of the men were barefooted and suffered considerably during this march of more than 75 miles.

It is a matter of general interest to our people that Col. John P. Nicholson, chairman of the Gettysburg National Military Park Commission was mustered into the service as early as June 28, 1861, in Co. K of this Regiment, was promoted from commissary sergeant to quartermaster September 10, 1862, brevetted Captain, Major and Lt. Col. March 13, 1865, and mustered out with the regiment July 15, 1865.

This new monument will add to the attractions of the field in the southeast and is a well merited memorial to this gallant regiment.

The other monument to the 28th which was dedicated September 11, 1889, is an imposing one on Culp's Hill, mounted with a large granite five pointed star, the 12th Corps badge.

A Much Needed Borough Ordinance.

The following communication was crowded out of last week's issue.

The erection recently of several large area frame shingle roofed buildings right in the closely built up portion of the town where already all the conditions are favorable for a conflagration, suggests the imperative duty of town council to pass some building regulations, at least for the central part of town, prohibiting the erection of frame shingle roofed buildings and permitting only brick or stone building with slate or tin roofs, also they should be some regulation as to fire walls and other details having in view the checking of fire.

While on this subject it might be well to obtain a copy of the regulations in force in larger neighboring towns which will doubtless contain valuable suggestions.

Gettysburg at best is but a poorly constructed town from a fire resisting standpoint, many of the dwellings and nearly all the stables are simply tinder box construction, and the limited fire lighting apparatus makes it a certainty that a conflagration will result just as soon as fire starts in one of the rows and nests of frame stables and other equally inflammable buildings which are to be found in all parts of the town.

We trust Council will take speedy action in the matter.

We also wish to call attention to Council to the fact that there are many places in town that no police regulations would permit in an up-to-date town, such as old tumble down stables and shops, stove pipes passing through roof or side of buildings, especially frame buildings and shingle roofs, steam engines with wood work close to the fire and no roof protection, and numerous other dangers.

What we need in this town imperatively for the protection of both life and property is police regulations against the fire hazard, and more important still, the rigid enforcement of same by the Council.

RAILROAD RATE FIGHT.

Pennsylvania and Wabash are at it Between York and Baltimore.

Gettysburg wont be in the railroad rate war for passenger traffic between York and Baltimore. The Pennsylvania opened the other day with the first gun, with a rate of 75 cents round trip between the two points. The rate is said to be the lowest ever offered for the same mileage. The Wabash met the cut immediately with a like rate. The Pennsylvania rate was over the Northern Central, which road it controls. The fight between these two great companies lasted a long time in Pittsburg and ever since the Wabash purchased the Western Maryland there have been indications that the fight would be transferred to this section.

It Saves You Money.

The special half price sale of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia by L. M. Buehler means the saving of a few dollars on every family's bill for medicines.

Each 50 cent bottle (Mr. Buehler sells it for 25c) contains sixty doses of a medicine that is pleasant to take and which can be depended upon to cure the worst case of constipation, dyspepsia or liver trouble. Mr. Buehler has so much faith in the superior merit of this medicine that he says: "If Dr. Howard's specific does not cure you, come back to my store and I will return your money."

If you are troubled with constipation, headache or dizziness, or if your food does not digest naturally and easily you cannot afford to let pass the special price that Mr. Buehler is making this week on Dr. Howard's specific.

This remedy is not an ordinary medicine. It is the favorite formula of a well known physician, and has the endorsement of hundreds of physicians of eminence in their profession, who prescribe it in all cases of constipation, dyspepsia or liver trouble, knowing from experience that it will make a complete and lasting cure.

ELECTION REFORMS.

One of the crying reforms of the time is personal registration for voters. A law is wanted to require that each voter must personally register himself once a year. It requires an amendment to the Constitution of the State before such a law can be passed but all the requirements have been complied with for such an amendment. The question was submitted to the voters of the State and by a vote of 214,795 to 45,601 the people said they wanted such a law. A bill to bring about personal registration was introduced in the Legislature of 1903 but was killed. The same bill will be re-introduced in session of 1905 and the Legislature will be asked to carry out the wishes of the people as they expressed in the proportion of four in favor to one against. The law will not affect the country districts. The purpose of the law is for honest government as opposed to fraud and political corruption in elections in cities. The "Philadelphia Press" has stated that under present laws the voting lists have been padded in Philadelphia to the extent of 75,000 to 80,000 names. The proposed law is to bring this to an end. Every citizen can help in this reform by writing the representatives of your county in the Legislature and asking their support for the personal registration law.

A QUESTION FOR TEACHERS

The teachers assembled in county institute might have added another clause to their resolutions, one in favor of making their calling a professional one hedged about with such requirements as there is about the legal and medical profession. Judge John Stewart of Chambersburg, recently expressed himself in favor of such a course and the idea is a capital one. It takes three years of study to prepare one to give legal advice and practice law. It takes three to four years of study before a physician can be authorized to experiment upon the human body with medicines. There are severe courses of studies and examinations to authorize the creation of dentists, druggists and veterinary surgeons. Yet sometimes a common school education or a term at a normal school or at most a year is considered ample preparation to have entrusted to the teacher the most precious part of the community, the children. Would it not be well to require all teachers to prepare themselves by at least three years studying before permitting them to teach. In this time they could be taught the many things they should know and how to teach. The minimum salary for such teachers should be largely increased. If a course was adopted to develop the professional teacher, it would be an incalculable benefit. It would prevent many young people from making a make-shift out of teaching until something better can be found. Superintendent Roth recently stated that there was only about forty teachers in the county who were teaching five years ago when he became superintendent. That is about one-fifth of the teachers are in the work to stay, of course a percentage drift to other points outside the county but the fact remains that the larger part teach a short time and then give it up. They can with little preparation be allowed to experiment with the minds of children while those who experiment with their bodies when ill must be prepared by years of study. If the experimenting was done with the teachers would it not be better, would it not develop the professional teacher, better salaries and then pensions for long and meritorious service would fit in most appropriately.

THE MOST POPULAR COLLEGE SONGS is the title of a very interesting collection, with both the music and the words. It contains all the old favorites, Noah's Ark, Son of a Gun-bolter, Big-a-jig, Up-dee and all the others. There are eighty-two songs in the collection and the book is well worth the price 50 cents. 50TH TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Wednesday Afternoon.

Institute opened with music led by Prof. March, "A-Down the Dell," "Sleighing," and the "Heart is in the Home."

Miss Johnson gave a ten minutes talk on "Spelling." A child will learn to give back to you what it sees. Give black-board work for seat work and use slips of paper. Habits of honesty and self-reliance can be learned in the primary school. Spell a word by the impression it makes upon us and not the old method of going over and over again. A short time was then taken up by Miss Johnson in "Number Work." Work from things to their relation. Facts to principles. Concrete to abstract. First development, then drill. To teach number work have your objects, but not too many. Use objects from nature. 4 and 3 are not objects, they are symbols. Would recommend picture work. Take up measuring, have foot-rules and yard sticks and begin your work on comparison. Comparison will help to teach the rudiments. Miss Johnson closed her work at the institute.

Music, "Come Away." An invitation was extended to the teachers by Dr. Nixon, of Pennsylvania College to visit the observatory on the campus and gave them the use of machine to look at the stars. Prof. Roth at this point introduced Pres. S. Gring Hefelbower of Pennsylvania College who spoke on subjects of personal experience. Pres. Hefelbower is a scholarly gentleman and gave a very able and instructive address.

Music, "The Birds' Concert," "Over the Snow," "Gift Divine."

Mr. Chambers favored the institute with a reading, and was greeted with great applause. Dr. Pattengill occupied the last period in the afternoon with "A Correlated History Lesson." The speaker drew a comparison from the War of 1812 and the War of 1861. The War of 1776 gave us our political independence and the War of 1812 gave us our second or commercial independence. The War of 1861 the prime question was slavery. John C. Calhoun was the first man to offer a protective tariff and it met with great opposition. He supposed he could stop the mills and regulate things to suit himself, but New England took the cotton from the South and made it into cloth, and beat Calhoun at his own game. He then declared the tariff null and void. Such is the very origin of the free trade and protective tariff laws. England would not consent that a neutral flag made neutral men, until the Spanish-American War. Dr. Pattengill closed with a selection entitled "Jonathan to John."

Wednesday Evening.

"Socialism" was the subject of the lecture delivered by Dr. Frank Nixon before the institute, and it was a masterful production. It was a rare treat for those who heard him. He held the audience for nearly two hours with his wit and eloquence. The College Orchestra furnished music.

Thursday Morning.

Institute opened with Prof. Roth in the chair. The teachers and friends of the Institute took advantage of the bright and pleasant weather that has favored everything relative to school work this week and came out early, and the hall was comfortably filled at the opening hour.

Music by Institute. Devotional exercises conducted by Rev. W. W. Hartman, of the M. E. church.

A short time was given Prof. March in music, and in concluding he complimented the teachers on the good work they were doing in this particular line.

Prof. Francis H. Green, of West Chester, was introduced and in his address on the "Recipe of Beauty" said he would confine his talk to inward rather than outward beauty. Prof. Green is a marvel in his work, is perfectly familiar with his subjects. Among the many good things he said, he put particular stress on this one point, "Teachers are makers of Beauty." We are encompassed by beauty on every hand and we do not see it. We find much of our beauty in action. In this age of hurry and rush we are not taking time to see beauty. He thanked God for the days of athletics. Physical culture, to develop our physical natures. It is the outward cosmetics that we pay no attention to, we want the inner ones. We do not want to be white outside and black inside. The recipe of beauty are three things—see beautiful pictures, learn beautiful music and be familiar with beautiful literature. Get these into your mind and soul. You are missing your opportunities of your duty if you do not read beautiful literature. Newspapers are foot-prints to history. Give the child the literature that applies to its nature.

Music, "Over the Snow," "Whistling Song," "Come Away."

Dr. Pattengill took up his subject, "Hints From Spinal." He would apply his remarks to teachers and parents. The Dr. said he would have to say a few things about foot ball, that this is foot ball day—it is a national day and a national game. His lesson was the grit, vim and push that is manifested in this game and wanted to know if it could not be applied to other things. Teachers we apply the same thing in the game of life. He urged upon the teachers to open their schools in the right way. Have morning exercises: It starts the work in the right spirit. The speaker drew some good lessons from his own personal experience in his own state in visiting schools with the County Superintendent. He showed the teachers and explained what good work can be done in some of the out-of-the-way districts where advantages are not known.

Miss Edna A. Rether gave a recitation in French dialect and one in child dialect, "Trials of an American Mother."

Thursday Afternoon.

Time set for the afternoon session was 2 o'clock, but long before the time the people began to gather until they packed the house from pit to dome.

Prof. March gave quite a drill in music—a period of 30 minutes.

Dr. Pattengill was the next on the program. Dr. Green had gone to the court house to address the people who were unable to get into the hall where the meetings were held during the week. Dr. Pattengill's subject was "America Spells Opportunity." The speaker showed the natural gateways of commerce that America shows for its advancement and that gave opportunity for development. He showed the character of the pioneers of this country who came here in our country's infancy and established this government for us. He paid an elegant tribute to the public schools. After the cabin had been put up by the pioneer he next built the cabin school house and then got to work to make money to educate his children. The political leaders have been educators of our country. Take America and divide into letters ability, adaptability and activity, manhood and money, manufacturers and mines, electricity, energy, railroad, righteousness, iron and industry, college, canals, culture, commerce, altruism, agriculture. Our flag means more to us than we have any idea. Our stripes on the flag mean something worthy of our name and nation. America has given a chance to our boys and girls that no country ever gave.

Miss Rether favored the institute with a selection, "A Christian," which was very well rendered.

Music by Prof. March and the institute. Prof. Green spoke to the institute on "Wanderings in Westminster Abbey." His subject was divided into four parts, historical, literary, architectural and legendary. He drew a plan of the abbey and explained it according to diagram. He described the burial places of the various poets, Kingsley, Cowper, Congreve, etc. Not all the poets he described were buried, but busts and memorial windows have been placed to their memory. Sir Isaac Newton and Charles Darwin are buried there.

Thursday Evening.

The Carmen Italian Boys gave their first appearance in Xavier Hall and had the largest audience of the week, and gave one of their best entertainments. They were masters in their profession. Mr. Poland is possessed of a clear voice and delivery and expressions full and natural.

Friday Morning.

Institute convened at 9 a. m. Music by Institute. Devotional exercises conducted by Dr. J. A. Gutz of St. James Church. The Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. An extended music drill was given by Prof. March. An entire review of the week. The usual attendance of teachers was noticeable.

Prof. Roth named the Bulletin Committee for next year by districts. The correspondents to same being as follows. Fairfield R. E. Fisher: Biglerville, Miss Weidner: Littlestown, J. M. Wisler: Highland, Miss Warthen: York Springs, W. E. Kraber: Mount Pleasant, Miss Melring: East Berlin, Miss Smith: Meshersytown, Miss Corrigan.

Prof. Roth introduced Dr. A. L. E. Crouter of Philadelphia, superintendent of the Institution of the Deaf and Dumb. The Dr. brought two of the boys here from his institution to further illustrate the work he has to do. He told briefly of what they do in their school and how they begin to teach the children. He described the great ignorance of a deaf child. We can not compare it to the child that hears. The first method employed is the "sign method" representing things by motion. The next step is language. We teach them voice and mould it into articulate speech, and voice is sound vibrating. The time for considering the deaf as dumb is past. The deaf child is taught sound separately. Then comes the word, first the spoken then the written. The uneducated deaf never know anything of the Supreme Being. Deaf mutes become lawyers, preachers, mechanics, and pursue almost every vocation that exists. They never leave the school until they have an education or a trade. Music, "The Gift Divine."

Prof. Green finished his talk on the "Wanderings in Westminster Abbey" and then took up the regular subject, "A Plea for Poetry." Poetry is compared to the rising of the lark in the morning as it soars higher it sings, and finally its music is lost in space. So with poetry as it gets into our souls. The most deplorable thing to his mind is that there is twice as much fiction sold in our country than poetry. The speaker defined the difference between verse and poetry. He made comparison between Dryden and Pope: of the greater he considered Dryden. Dryden originated artificial poetry and when he died his mantle fell on Pope. He called attention to the bust of Longfellow in the Abbey and the burial place of Tennyson and Browning.

Music, "Message Sweet," "Whistle Away, Boys."

Dr. Pattengill was the last speaker for the morning his subject being "A Spell," the vocabulary we use. We barely use 1500 to 1600 words in our speaking. We don't want bad spellers. Teach your children how to spell. Three things demand our attention. Take time to spell. There are too many people who are looking up hard words to spell and pay no attention to the small words. Don't give more than two hard ones in each lesson. Use primitive and derivative words. Don't pay any attention to words that are of no use to the pupil. The speaker advised the use of tests, not too long, but teacher to use discretion. Have a spelling match every month. He illustrated it with a spelling match in the institute.

Friday Afternoon.

Institute convened at 1:30 p. m. Music by institute and the last drill. It was noticed that there was an absence of teachers as the institute was drawing to a close but the interest of the public was just the same.

Dr. Pattengill in giving his talk thanked the superintendent for his courtesy, and the teachers for their interest and was glad he was with them this week. Dr. Pattengill spoke in his last speech on "Boarding Round." He gave some funny experiences and told a little story of the old lady who said, "Her butchering was done, her soap was boiled and when she had the school teacher boarded her dirty work would be done." In boarding round you get right into the home. He did not believe in a boy "over-studying himself," he was made ill or over-worked by other rude habits than study. In many homes there was no chance for study—too much confusion and it was well for the teacher to get into homes like these, and even better and it would give the teacher an idea how to teach that boy or girl. Take a good book along with you when you go to a home and work with them. Just as soon as you can and not later than the first month become acquainted with the parents of all the pupils. Learn their ways and manners, study their dispositions and you have done your best work for a successful teacher. Have them co-operate with you in your work, let them help to decorate your room, and you be a visitor in their home. Let there be joy in the songs you sing. When you go out of your school and in after years, let there be something in each one of them that will cling to you. Public sentiment is the greatest factor in governing a school and you ought to have it all on your side.

Music by the institute.

Prof. Green took up the subject, "Guiding Principles in Teaching Language." He said the English was a conglomeration. You take a little of this and a little of that, mix them together and call it English. Take notice of the two types of English, colloquial and literary, see the beauty of language and teach the boy that, and use your words accordingly. Seek definitions wholly truthful. Begin at the right place and teach truthful things. Make grammar an art and a science. No one can teach grammar without having a knowledge of language. Illustrate wisely. Train the children to the use of simplest language. Get the boys into best language. Cling to practical important things.

After report of Memorial Committee and of the Auditing Committee had been approved Prof. Roth closed, the institute with a brief address thanking everybody for their assistance.

The closing hymn was "The Gift Divine," with benediction by Rev. H. G. G. Vincent of the Church of the Prince of Peace.

Friday Evening.

The closing entertainment by the Harmony Quartette Company, composed of young ladies, was one of the great treats of the week. They were most accomplished performers on piano, violin, viola and flute.

Report of Committee on Resolutions

First that we hereby extend our thanks to the Supt. H. Milton Roth for his untiring interest in the advancement of the schools of Adams Co. and the cause of Education.

We also express our hearty appreciation of his forethought and excellent judgment in the selection of so able a corps of instructors and entertainments thereby making this institute one of the most successful institutes held in the Co.

Second, that we extend thanks to all who have rendered gratuitous services for the benefit of the Institute. We are thankful to the ushers for services rendered.

Third, that teachers would show more professional spirit by being in attendance in their respective districts or local institutes and taking an active part in the exercises.

Fourth, that we believe in pensioning teachers for long and meritorious service, that we believe that such a pension would result in the betterment of the common schools and that therefore we would urge upon our representatives in the next session of the State Legislature to make an effort to secure the passage of such laws.

Fifth, resolved that we favor that the law giving directors mileage for expense, should be so amended as to give them mileage and compensation at the rate of one dollar and fifty cents per diem, and that we would so urge upon our representatives to the next session of the state Legislature.

The Second Ice Yacht Race

By GEORGE

Copyright, 1904, by George Ethelbert Walsh

THE annual race for the $100 prize and championship cup of the Upper river was over, and Harold Stetson was looking ruefully at his craft, which had just missed winning the coveted trophies. It was a bitter disappointment because the ice yacht he had built with such skill and labor was really the faster boat of the two, which had run neck and neck for the prize across a stretch of five miles of shimmering ice. For six months he had been preparing for the race, spending his odd moments in perfecting every little detail that might in the crucial moment decide the contest. In a fair trial and a fair field he had been confident of victory. Others had not shared this belief until they had seen the burst of speed which the Ice King developed in the last mile of the race. Then Harold had sent her down the course with all the skill of good maneuvering, and the yacht had fairly leaped into the air to skim merrily over rather than on the ice.

"Why, she only seemed to touch about every hundred feet!" some one of the spectators exclaimed in admiration.

"I never saw her equal before," added another.

"The young fellow who owns her built her, they say," volunteered a third critic. "If so he'll take the prize next year."

"Well, it was too bad. By rights the prize should go to him. It wasn't fair."

These remarks were pleasant to hear, but they did not change the condition of affairs. The race was lost—lost to him and won by one who did not need the money as Harold did.

Chetson Allison had not played fair, and none knew it better than the two contestants for the prize. At the critical moment when the Ice King was rushing down in a spurt which would have carried her to victory with a handsome margin Chetson had altered his course, changed it so that a collision was inevitable unless Harold was willing to sacrifice the race. It was a trick which the judges could not well define from their distant position. Chetson said that it was an accident. His willingness to confess and apologize made it impossible for Harold to protest.

A brave mariner might have kept on his course, some thought. "I wouldn't have veered an inch for him," remarked one. "He could have smashed into me, but I'd have the race."

This Harold also knew was within his rights, but there were reasons which he could not explain. The Ice King had not been built primarily for a racer nor exactly for a pleasure craft. It was modeled and built by Harold to help him in his winter's work on the Upper river. All through the winter when ice covered the river he journeyed up and down the stream, carrying the products of the chase on his ice yacht to and from market.

To smash his yacht in a collision simply to maintain his rights or even to win the coveted prize was hardly good policy. It would have crippled him all toed by the water. "And I'll try to come back next year with the same yacht improved a little in speed."

Then, getting his few things together, he started on his homeward trip. It was a long run up the river, and he was catching on. But the wind was favorable and blowing a steady breeze. Ahead of him were a dozen other boats heading up stream, too, all bound for home. The Ice King brought up the rear of the pretty procession.

In half an hour Harold had passed all the boats in the procession except one. This craft was so far ahead that he doubted if it had been in the race. It was probably some craft belonging to one of the yacht clubs further up the river and was making a solitary trip to some distant point.

Steadily, however, the Ice King overhauled her, gaining so rapidly on her that Harold concluded that the owner of it was in no hurry to complete his journey. Fifteen minutes later he studied the outline of the sail ahead and then muttered half aloud, "It's Chetson in the Snow Bunting!"

Immediately he felt the blood mounting to his forehead, and his eyes flashed. The winner of the prize was half a mile ahead of him and going in the same direction. Silently the Ice King crept up on the boat ahead, and then Harold shouted:

"Hello, Chetson! Let's have another race! If I can't beat you this time I'll take back all I said and thought!"

Chetson turned abruptly and saw his rival creeping upon him. His face darkened. There was no chance to evade the challenge.

"I'm only going a few miles farther, and then!"

"Oh, we don't need more than a few miles! I'll pass you before!"

These words stung, and the Snow Bunting was hauled up in the path of the Ice King. The Ice King likewise shifted her course a little, and the two scudded along at a rapid pace. The wind had gradually increased in the last half hour, and both boats labored and groaned heavily under the strain imposed upon them.

The Snow Bunting was no inferior craft. It was a worthy rival to the Ice King. It had been built by a noted constructor and designer, and it had all the modern improvements which money could purchase. Harold knew this and had been made aware of it in the race for the prize. But despite this he felt that his craft could outlast her.

So it proved in a short time. Inch by inch and foot by foot he gained on his adversary. But it was a close and long race. Both navigators were warned to the fray. Harold had tauntingly insinuated that the race for the prize had not been a fair one. In the heat of the moment he had said that Chetson had deliberately threatened his boat to win the race by a foul.

All this rankled deep in the heart of Chetson, and Harold even felt the necessity of apologizing to himself for his words. "If I can't beat him now I was wrong, and I'll tell him so. But I can and will beat him!"

Faster and faster the boats flew, the wind joining in the race by adding strength to the power which drove them onward. Town and village were passed in quick succession, and still they kept on their course. The Ice King was a boat's length behind its rival, and there it hung on the flank of the Snow Bunting for two miles. Then it crept up and gradually pushed its nose even with its rival.

The sun had set, and darkness was falling over the river's surface, but neither navigator noticed the flight of time or the change in the landscape. They saw only each other and the white sails belling out before the breeze. Neither spoke nor changed his position an inch.

They were soon past all towns and farmhouses, and the banks of the river were lined with dark, frowning fringes of woods and forests. Back from the river as far as the eyes could see there were broken woods, swamps and forest, clad hills.

Once or twice out of the shadows of the woods dark objects appeared, and in a subconscious way they felt rather than saw that wolves were rushing at them. But what fear had they for wolves or any other species of wild animal of the woods? No four footed creature of field or forest could ever hope to keep pace with their yachts.

The Ice King was now making one of its marvelous spurts of speed. It lifted itself by its sails clean from the ice, and for a long distance the runners seemed never to touch the surface. Its nose shot forward one, two, three, four, five feet, then a dozen feet, and in five minutes it was a boat length ahead and still increasing the lead.

Harold held his breath. His prediction was now intense. His old adversary returned. He could not resist from turning and staring at his old grined adversary. Then in taunting words he shouted: "No chance for a foul this time, Chetson! There's no clean field! Smash me if you can!"

Chetson did not reply, and in the gloom Harold could not see his face.

The Snow Bunting was already disappearing in the gloom, for darkness was all around, and it was impossible to see far ahead or over the stern. The sail and craft described a huge shapeless form on the river, and then she faded away.

But almost simultaneously with her disappearance there came a crash out of the darkness and a cry of fear or dismay. Harold landed his boat up in the wind and listened. He heard a queer noise from out of the darkness. Then he ran across the river and back again, sailing almost in the track of the race. But the river, seemed empty, and the Snow Bunting had apparently disappeared. Fearful lest something had happened, Harold shouted. There was a faint response, and then a growl and yelp of a wolf. It was a blood curdling yelp, followed quickly by another and then a human cry. Harold trembled with excitement and wonder. Suddenly out of the gloom ahead he caught sight of a huge, formless object on the ice. Instinctively he guessed its meaning. It was the broken mast and sail of the Snow Bunting piled in wreckless disorder over the craft.

But beside it and tugging away at something near the sail were half a dozen dark bodies which he recognized as huge, hungry wolves. It was a critical moment, and for an instant Harold did not know how to act. He shouted loudly to frighten the wolves away, heading his boat directly for them as if to run them down. The Ice King was now sailing directly in the wind again, and she was clipping along at a speed which made the ice fly.

The wolves snarled and snarled, angrily resenting this great object flying toward them. But they did not retreat. They had run down one such creature and found it to be made of wood and cloth. What harm could there come, then, from this new one looming up out of the darkness?

Their brief challenge, however, gave both Harold and Chetson a moment to think and breathe. The latter staggered to his feet and dragged himself to one side. Then a huge wolf leaped upon him again and pulled him sprawling to the ice. Harold shouted to frighten the beast, but it was no use. The animal was hungry and savage.

Then in a moment Harold felt the inspiration of the moment and acted on it. He knew that he had one chance in a hundred of accomplishing it. With a steady hand he steered his craft straight for the dismantled Snow Bunting, holding the nose of the Ice King so firmly and steadily toward the point that a collision seemed inevitable. A waver of a hair's breadth might precipitate an accident which would ruin all. The skill of a man with iron nerves was required to avoid an accident.

When the prow of the Ice King was within half an inch of the wreck it veered sharply to the left, swinging the craft around so fiercely that the runners actually became entangled in some of the rigging. But the sharp, steel shod runners cut the small ropes in two and spun on their way over the surface of smooth ice. In that brief instant, however, Harold had stretched forth a hand and grasped Chetson by the leg. There was a quick gasp, a groan, and then the Ice King cleared the wreck and rushed on her way.

Harold clung to the leg of Chetson and slowly pulled him toward the yacht. In the sudden change of affairs the big wolf had been shaken from his hold and was now vainly running in pursuit of his disappearing prey. But not so the two other big wolves that had boldly challenged the approaching craft. They had leaped upon it as the yacht swept past them. There they stood in the dim light, cowering with fear and dread, on the forward part of the yacht. The unexpected speed which carried them along had robbed them of all anger and spirit. They crouched closely to the boat, uttering low whines and snarls, but not daring to move forward or jump from the dying craft.

When Chetson was securely pulled on the Ice King, Harold saw his two passengers in the front, and for a moment he thought they were ready to spring upon them. But when he saw their craven fear he laughed.

"Look, Chetson! Isn't that sight worth all our danger? Did you ever see such frightened animals?"

In spite of his wounds Chetson joined in the laugh, but the noise made by them brought matters to a sudden climax. Both wolves darted from their perch and fell headlong on the ice, where they rolled over and over, while the Ice yacht sped on through the darkness at fifty miles an hour.

"They'll never board another Ice yacht, I'll bet," was Harold's comment. "Not unless they go back and chew up my wrecked one," replied Chetson. "It's a pretty sad wreck, and—"

"Probably not so bad as you think. We'll go back in the morning and pick it up," replied Harold. "You'll have to go home with me tonight, and in the morning I'll help you rig it up again."

With the second race thus happily ended, the bitterness between them was forgotten, and later, when Harold finished rigging up the Snow Bunting, Chetson insisted upon sending workmen to make the addition to his home as a fair payment in return. As for the next cup race—well, they're both looking forward to it this winter.

The two oldest men in Reading township are John Stauffer and William Criswell. The first named lives with his nephew, Nathaniel Baker about four miles from this place and walks to town as lively as a young man but will be 92 years old next May. DEATH OF MRS. M. BIXLER.

White Hall, Pa., Nov. 25.—On last Wednesday while Mr. John Culp our huckster from McSherrystown was gathering produce in our village, his horses frightened and ran away. After running over a mile the wagon collided with a tree and was demolished. Strange! the eggs in the crates were not broken in the smashup.

Last Sunday was very disagreeable. We had a very heavy snowstorm for this season of the year. There is still a small remnant left at this writing. Parties who were at Gettysburg on last Monday and Tuesday attending court informed me that very little snow was on the ground in and around Gettysburg, whilst in this section the ground was covered with several inches. Strange! that 7 miles should make such a difference. either in the snowfall or may the cause be attributed to the difference in the soil the one causing the snow to melt more rapidly than the other.

The principal reason why a visit should be made to this greatest of Expositions is on account of its educational value.
